Helping people living with Dementia in our community

Do you work with or know people with Dementia?

Do you know what to do if they go missing?

People with dementia want to be as independent as possible and to remain in their own homes for as long as they can.

As the disease progresses, someone with dementia will experience increasing problems with their memory and can often feel vulnerable and in need of reassurance and support. Assistive technology is now available that helps them to do this, and makes it easier for others to be able to support them.

The memory of some people with dementia may be such that they believe they are living in the past. People may seek to find or return to former associates, addresses, work places or other places that have been important to them. Knowing about these associations could be vital in helping to locate them quickly before the person with dementia comes to harm.

Chichester Careline can provide GPS device which can be worn by people with dementia giving carers peace of mind and users more freedom.

Tel: 01243 778 688 / chichestercareline@chichester.gov.uk

Details of GPS devices used can be found on Mindme website
